Course dates

1 July - 7 July

Course fees

£655

Course location

University of Kent

Target audience

Native and non-native speaking teachers of all levels - from primary to adult.

You will need B1+/B2 to C1/C1+ level of English.

Course summary

This one-week course is designed to help you understand more about how to assess your students learning and your own teaching.

During the course, you will become familiar with performance-based learning assessment, assessment alternatives for diverse classrooms, how to grade for learning and the different tools for assessing, evaluating and feedback. The course is also aimed at fostering language improvement while learning. It will enable you to write your own rubrics, charts and tables, plan assessments and use Portfolios for language learning. The course will also help you be more confident in using English, reflect on creating a successful climate for learning which, in turn, will enhance your fluency, improve your self-confidence and master the language learnt thus enjoying assessing in English.

Materials will be created for the group by the main trainer, supplemented by published materials and by work presented by the participants themselves.
